

Accompanying text and teaching text to the interview by Maria Kageaki,

Initiator of the dental health symposium with Carola Sarrasin, Initiator of the Thailand project,

Dental health and the new mankind of tomorrow

The knowledge about tooth regeneration - as well as about the entire universe - is already present in every human being. Every toddler does not need to be taught how to grow a complete set of teeth, and even twice in a row. Only the collective consciousness on this planet still contains the information that it should not be possible for us humans to grow another set of teeth.

This is, of course, illogical, along with several other beliefs, makes no sense at all, and goes 180 degrees towards the Creator Thought, but shows us how powerful this mass consciousness is. It influences people from morning to evening, and unfortunately in some areas of life also unfavorably. The questions, who brought this unfavorable information into the collective consciousness and why, is to be investigated elsewhere, but in the meantime more and more useful information, as well as the regrowth of "third teeth" in the collective consciousness, have fortunately become established.

Every impairment of health, every loss of teeth - everything at all - has arisen in consciousness. Therefore our own consciousness is exactly the area where we can completely restore ourselves - and nowhere else. Consciousness is much more than our day-thinking, our intellectual mind, it is a gigantic light structure consisting of many areas, including a highly active area: perception.

In the majority of cases we could reduce everyday life to 2 points:

1. first something happens - then we perceive it (or often don't perceive it) and
2. we perceive something - and react.

The usual reaction to toothache is to go to the dentist; "Please give me an injection, please pull this painful tooth". Problem solved. But is it really? Wouldn't a completely healthy tooth be the real solution? Do you know a dentist who can teach you how to heal an impacted tooth? Or even to let it grow back?

Many people use the logical phase of consciousness, the intellectual mind, for this purpose, but unfortunately this very area is not able to solve a problem, because a) it does not contain the necessary knowledge to solve the problem, b) it is much too slow for this and c) our mind is not even made for this. It is for this there to recognize a problem and name it. But for the solution we need to go much faster. We have to overtake the problem, so to speak, to solve it. If we are faster than the impairment, then we have defeated it.

Every human being has these ultra-fast speeds at his or her disposal in several areas, in the body (including the heart), in the mind, in the soul and in consciousness. Unfortunately, this knowledge is not (yet) taught at school and university. One of these areas of consciousness is intuition, but we could already train the area of perception to high speeds:

This area is located between our body and about 1 meter away from it - directly in front of us. Everything that we perceive is also found in this area at the same time, it is reflected there quasi in small format, whether a house, a tree, an airplane or the toothache. Fortunately, the knowledge that we create reality with our thoughts has become generally accepted in the meantime. If we transfer this to our active area, perception, it turns out as follows:

1. If we perceive a problem and 'look away' or do nothing, it still remains.
2. If a kind of worry or fear reaction spreads within us, the problem increases.
3. however, if we 'rebuild' it harmoniously in the area of perception in a flash, then this is transferred to the outside!

An example for point 3: We hear in the news that a nuclear power plant has exploded. The immediate reconstruction of this situation could be, for example, that we see grass growing right next to the reactor. This small, inconspicuous "film" that we have just created is transferred to the outside!

So we can proceed with any problematic situation. The important thing is not to look away and not to allow fear. If fear should have crept in nevertheless once, then the knowledge of a universal law is very helpful:

The freedom of decision.

As "children of God" we have also been given free will or free choice. In a real panic situation, we can hardly analyze where this comes from and what it brings, there is no room for that, but we can, for example, decide for love in a flash. What would love do at this point? How would love react? This space is always given thanks to the Creator's law of freedom of choice!

This is of course transferable to any situation. The only important thing is that we make decisions, because many people have been trained to do so.

So I can make the choice to have a tooth grown back. Nobody can prevent me from doing so, because it is a universal law. However, there are some 'preventers' lurking in the background for which we should be prepared, including a) the own mind, the logic, which does not know enough how to do that and does not show the needed speeds. The intellect is only a small part of consciousness, but nevertheless a superior one, if we give it 'free run'. Many identify themselves almost exclusively with their intellect and serve it as the role of the whole "I". "I cannot do this", "I need more time", "I am simply slower than others" etc.

This, however, only refers to the mind, because our body is already immensely fast, considering that every cell with a cell nucleus carries out about 1 quadrillion activities per second. So the body neither needs time, nor is it unable to do something, nor is it too slow. Not to mention other areas of the human personality. Thus, the human mind even operates completely outside of time. And in this case the spirit is both the important transmitter of information and the actor that creates the matter of the new tooth. The whole thing is organized by our soul. It also exists outside of time and space, which means that a tooth - with a correspondingly expanded consciousness - can also grow back immediately and not like a shark, which takes about 6 hours to grow back.

The soul is the basic structure of the human being. It contains all the information of the universe, so it knows everything that the Creator knows, because our soul is the same as the Creator soul. Unfortunately, only the mind does not know everything, only what it has 'learned' in physical reality - and among them was a lot of false knowledge.

But the intellect prefers to believe. It believes, for example, that teeth cannot grow back a third, fourth, fifth, or umpteenth time. And this is where the overpowering intellect shows itself, because what it believes, it creates for itself!

The main problem of our present time - as with tooth growth - is that the majority of people no longer perceive themselves holistically. Holistic would be: I am creator, I am soul, I am spirit, I am consciousness and I am body. The physical reality, the body, is therefore only a fifth of what and who I really am. Four structural parts of the human personality are therefore in the spiritual / invisible realm and are often ignored. Some people of the mind like to call themselves "realists", according to the motto, only what they can see is reality - and thereby they overlook their four ultra-fast areas, which are exactly there to solve problems! By the way, our consciousness ALWAYS binds physical and mental (visible and invisible) reality and sees it as a whole. Only the logical mind has its problems with it, if it has not been trained.

b) the collective consciousness

A person does not die from the consequences of time but from the negative influences of the collective consciousness. The body reflects our thoughts. If they are destructively directed towards decay, old age and death, then exactly that happens. For example, religions have considered the physical body as unimportant, its infinite existence and eternal development. But exactly this information of infinite physical existence and its eternal development (and restoration) is in of the soul. Everything started with a thought. Space = volume. When a thought is placed inside, it fills the space. And already new knowledge reaches the collective consciousness.

University medicine, on the other hand, sees only the body and ignores the other four areas of the human being. When the mental development stops, civilization is destroyed. The Atlanteans have worked with magic and destroyed themselves. We have awakened and every day there are more and more. There might be some danger from the technocratic development, but it does not prevail.

We are working on the structure of our inner world. Because everything we see is a projection of the soul, from inside to outside, depending on the collective consciousness. The world we are experiencing now in this form was created by the collective consciousness. The life form, nature, everything. On other planets there are other forms of life. To live on other planets, man would have to change his consciousness. He would have to take the form of consciousness that exists on the other planet, then it is possible. But the change of consciousness is always connected with the structure of the soul! Changes are possible. Whoever has a highly developed consciousness can make all kinds of changes.

The human body represents infinite love. He can only create with love. The world is built through our thoughts, words and energies, also through desire. But the world is built as the collective consciousness accepts it. When the collective consciousness is ready for change, then the world changes. This knowledge was not present in the collective consciousness for a long time. Now it is contained. When the world population has this knowledge, the collective consciousness has already changed. Then paradise will appear in every human being.

With the application of spiritual techniques such as tooth regeneration, we can help ourselves as well as other people. When we restore ourselves, the outside world is also restored, because the world we see around us is the projection of our soul to the outside world. The image we see is an average image created by the collective consciousness. It is not easy to change the collective consciousness. Therefore it is very important to recognize first and foremost oneself. Only with self-knowledge will we also understand how the world is built and how we can change it for the better. Those who become aware that the outside world is the projection of the soul can change the space and adapt themselves.

The 'official' science does not yet know that the stem cell is a projection of the soul.

And so I will come straight to the technique of tooth regeneration, because for this we also concentrate on stem cells.

If the necessity of the holistic perception of oneself is so far understandable, then a word about the activity of the spiritual consciousness:

We go with our consciousness, our thinking and with concentration to the high, spiritual level, because it is from there that everything physically materializes. Everything is first of all information, condenses, receives energy, crystallizes and then becomes matter. Even if the materialization of a tooth should happen immediately, it would first require the thought of this information. I call this kind of concentration an active STEERING. I actively steer the information, the events in the direction I want - and I am not passively steered or remotely controlled. This is why the active participation of each individual in his or her recovery processes is so important and decisive.

Here, too, we have been led away from ourselves and have hardly noticed that we have given up all responsibility for our own lives. Of course, no one else takes it over, but at least we are led to believe so:

The responsibility for education was handed over at the school door
The responsibility for the soul at the church door

The responsibility for health at the door of the doctor or the healer

The responsibility for one's own voice in politics (and even into an urn)

Responsibility for property at the insurance company
Responsibility for own money at the bank

The responsibility for one's own right at the lawyer's and the courts
The responsibility for education today already at the crib door

The responsibility for further development and 'knowledge' at the Bild newspaper or the mass media etc. etc.

The list can be extended at will, but at this point it should suffice to point out how far we have moved away from individual responsibility - and how deeply we are anchored in a system in which such a collective consciousness has been able to establish itself.

To take over this personal responsibility again is a prerequisite, not only for the success in tooth regeneration, but generally for the further life and the building of a stable future.

A second prerequisite, which is closely linked to the withdrawal of self-responsibility, is faith in myself. If I don't have that, how could I ever create something constructively? As an image of the creator, we are of course equipped with the same abilities. The fact that we are not always able to show this NOCH to its full extent is due, apart from the influences of the current mass consciousness, to a conditioning that has lasted for thousands of years and separated us humans from our creative existence.

So if we re-establish this contact between our five structural parts and look at ourselves holistically, as we are, we have already gained a lot.

It is not difficult, because we have been given several creation mechanisms at once. Among them is a very strong level of manifestation, namely: the spoken word.

Everything we say is like a bird that has flown away and cannot be caught. Thought is the origin, the basis of the world.

In the beginning was the Word, the Word was with God, the Word was God. These 3 sentences open the huge information that God appeared in the body of man! So we do not have to look for him in heaven or anywhere else. We are also far beyond seeking God in spirituality, because this again arises from a feeling of separation. However, we are permanently with everything and everyone connected, with every human being with every star and with every blade of grass and this describes another universal law: The ubiquitous connection.

These simple truths also mean that EVERYTHING is already present in us, the cosmic intelligence, harmony, abundance etc., so that common favourite excuses why this or that should not be possible can be confidently thrown overboard.

With the pronounced word we have got a creation mechanism at hand. In this way, the Creator shows us how to build the external reality. He has made it steerable for us.

The soul corresponds to the inner world, the word corresponds to the outer world and the union of inside and outside is the principle of world building!

The Word is the key to the gate and opens it. A loudly expressed desire/word creates an echo, because all spaces are inside: "I allow myself to let my tooth grow back.

The entire steering, simply spoken, could look like this, for example:

For the regeneration of missing teeth I make the DECISION above all.

I am aware that a missing tooth does not represent the Creator's norm, that meaningful functions and connections have been lost, that I, influenced by the collective consciousness, had entered unwanted "foreign events" and that a completely intact body is part of my spiritual perfection.

To connect to the mental structure that is responsible for materialization, I say

"I am in the spirit and, as an image of the Creator, I see and act as the Creator sees and acts" (for the Creator is certainly not lacking any teeth, he never gets sick either).

Because of the omnipresent connection I speak a so-called

Macro rescue off:

"Rescue and harmonious development for all people and this world. Every human being is able to restore his teeth."

My personal steering goal is:

"Regeneration of my tooth to the norm of the creators."

Now I am changing the events that led to my tooth loss, thus changing the past.

Since time also originated in the human consciousness, we can of course consciously direct it, i.e. change it for our goals. The same applies to space].

"I see the cause of my missing tooth and direct my consciousness until one hour before the trigger of the cause, the later tooth loss. I decide not to have participated in the events. Time and space have not met. I have gone my light path of the Creator - always with healthy teeth. The events and their participants have gone their light paths. Our paths have not crossed. I illuminate my decision with the light of my soul and fix the result with the light of the Creator.

"For the regeneration of teeth I take an informative (adult)

Stem cell from my bone marrow. I give her two light impulses:

1. materialization and

2. tooth growth.

I place this informed stem cell in the 'point of origin of the space of the (still missing) tooth'. Matter of eternal life' provided by the Creator, I gratefully accept and inform them: 'Regeneration of my tooth to the NORM' and place it in the space of the (missing) tooth. Behind it I place a 'Shining Screen of the Creator', with the program: 'Conversion Negative to Positive' and give the impulse: 'Regeneration to the Norm'. I send another light impulse to the whole space of the tooth. This impulse resembles the very important idea that the whole tooth is already present in the norm of the Creator. So are all connections to the body.

I illuminate the entire steering with the light of my soul and the light of the Creator and fix the result on all levels of reality and according to all parameters of creation - NOW and for all times".

[Please note date and time].

If several teeth are missing, I regenerate one by one and start with the one that fell out, was extracted or was operated on first. If I can't remember it, I intuitively start regenerating the tooth that I think was the first missing tooth.

Self-confidence is very important here.

Of course we can also restore decayed teeth. Our gums, the necks of our teeth - and, as already mentioned in the interview, also convert one matter into another. This concerns for example bridges, crowns or implants.

There are no limits to the human capacity. They are set only by our own consciousness or logic. To get them under better control, we can simply allow our logic a few minutes of rest and ask it not to disturb us during this mental activity. With increasing consciousness development we will one day raise our logical mind to the level of the creator mind, the cosmic intelligence. For today, may this concentration be carried out first.

I would be very pleased about every successful result, gladly with a 'before and after photo', and I ask you to send it to:
carola.thailandproject@gmail.com

My web address is: <https://thailandproject.asia/wordpress/> and again, I look forward to your visit to my website, and of course to your visit to one of my seminars in Thailand, at the Grabovoi® Center Chiang Mai.

For those who do not have the opportunity to travel to Thailand, you will find on my website a list of well-trained instructors, who pass on this knowledge in their own seminars, as well as an event calendar, where and when which seminar is offered. My seminars in Thailand are both practical and training seminars, also for those who are reorienting their activities and who would like to teach this helpful teaching themselves as a lecturer.

My young YouTube channel offers some interviews and further information: Thailand Project - School of Eternal Life

<https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCIIBC-F4SaqUEG7TqoxsYgw/videos>

I wish you all the best and a happy success!

Carola Sarrasin